SF Contemporary Music Players present 'A Celebration of the Elements:' a community music event
December 8, 2019 at The Women's Building in San Francisco, featuring the U.S. premiere of a new work by composer Vivian Fung, with special guest artist Haruka Fujii.

SAN FRANCISCO (November 14, 2019) – San Francisco Contemporary Music Players announces an event on Sunday, December 8, from 3-4:30 pm at The Women's Building in San Francisco's Mission District, featuring the U.S. premiere of a new work by composer Vivian Fung, with special guest artist Haruka Fujii. This event is a part of the Contemporary Players' annual In the Community series, which presents contemporary musical works in a fun, festive and welcoming atmosphere.

Vivian Fung, Bay Area resident and internationally renowned Canadian composer, has created a work with a strongly topical and urgent meditation about the beauty and importance of our natural resources. As California and the west coast continues to experience the effects of droughts and increasingly destructive wildfires, we pause for a moment of reflection, remembrance and communal gathering to consider the life-sustaining qualities of nature's most essential elemental force through Fung's recently composed piece for solo percussion, The Ice is Talking.

Premiered in the summer of 2018 at the Banff Centre in Alberta- itself situated in the midst of snow-capped mountain peaks and nearby retreating glacial flows in the Canadian Rockies- the piece utilizes taps and swishes on three blocks of ice 'to illustrate the beauty and fragility of our environment.' Augmented by electronic means, which might suggest in sideways fashion mankind's impact on the forces of nature, the piece weaves its thesis through the very act of performing on a medium that is ever so slowly melting away over the course of the performance itself.

We then open the door for group interaction and commentary through a communal piece called "How to (blank)," by composer and member of Sō Percussion Quartet Jason Hussein Treuting, where audience members are invited to join in creating music based in part on the day's news headlines (and, avid instrumentalists with portable instruments are invited to bring them!).

The concert will take place at The Women's Building in San Francisco, located at 3543 18th St, #8, San Francisco, CA 94110 on December 8, 2019. Doors open at 3:00pm, with light snacks and refreshments available before and after the performance.

JUNO Award-winning composer Vivian Fung has a unique talent for combining idiosyncratic textures and styles into large-scale works, reflecting her multicultural background. NPR calls her “[o]ne of today’s most eclectic composers.” This is supported by many of her recent works, including Humanoid for solo cello and prerecorded electronics; Clarinet Quintet: Frenetic Memories, a reflection on her travels to visit minority groups in China’s Yunnan province; Earworms, commissioned by Canada’s National Arts Centre Orchestra, which musically depicts our diverted attention spans and our multi-tasking lives; and The Ice Is Talking for solo percussion and electronics, using three ice blocks to illustrate the beauty and fragility of our environment.

Highlights of Fung’s 2018–2019 season include a new orchestral work commissioned by the Winnipeg New Music Festival; a new work for two solo violins and strings for the Manitoba Chamber Orchestra, to be premiered in Winnipeg and then taken on MCO’s tour of the Maritime provinces; and a new string quartet for the American String Quartet, commissioned by the Red Bank Chamber Music Society.

Born in Edmonton, Canada, Fung received her doctorate from The Juilliard School in New York. She currently lives in California, where she is on the faculty of Santa Clara University, and currently serves as Vice Chair of the board of the American Composers Forum. About Jason Hussein Treuting, Composer

<http://www.goodchildmusic.com/jason-treuting/>

<http://sfcmp.org/press-kits/>

Composer/performer/improviser Jason Treuting enjoys making pieces that translate numbers and letters into patterns of sound. He has made music with and for Sō Percussion, QQQ, Alligator Eats Fish, Matmos, Kneebody, Steve Mackey, Big Farm and many other experimental artists. As a composer, Jason has written and recorded a film score for Jenise Treuting’s “Invitations and Ultimatums.” This project led to “Amid the Noise,” a collection of 12 short pieces paired with films of street scenes from Japan and the US. Described as “rich and engrossing” by Time Out NY, ‘Amid the Noise’ premiered at the Whitney Museum and toured the US and Canada in Fall of 2006 with stops at the Wexner Art Center, the Warhol Museum, the Boston MFA, the Walker Art Center and the Lincoln Center Festival. His newest band, Alligator Eats Fish, with longtime collaborator Grey McMurray, mixes composed music with improvisation and film and is gathering music for their first release, ‘A Scattered Week.’

Another project with Sō Percussion, Music for Trains, culminated in a site specific concert in Brattleboro and Bellows Falls, VT, with two outdoor concerts at the towns train stations, music for a video installation in the train depot and two collaborative pre-recorded scores to accompany the train rides that were written with Josh Quillen and Eric Beach of Sō. The music grew out of a month long residency in the Southern VT, gathering sounds, interviews, materials and inspiration for the evening length score. In Fall of 2009, Sō’s multi-media piece ‘Imaginary City’ toured the US with stops in Helena, Cleveland, Houston, Denver and Burlington, culminating with four nights at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. ‘Imaginary City’ was commissioned by the NPN Creation Fund and the Brooklyn Academy of Music. Other recent commissions include the Greenwall Foundation/Solar One’s support of ‘16 Words,’ a set of shorts based on Merriam-Webster’s 16 new words from 2006, presented in the form of a spelling bee, and the Argosy foundations support for Music for Trains. His music has been featured on NPR’s Weekend Edition, WNYC’s Soundcheck and Evening Music. Jason is a member of ASCAP and has been recorded on Cantaloupe Music. His music is published by Good Child Music.
